	2024-25	150,689	1,070	0.7%

The Special Education forecast declined by 10.2 percent in 2020-21 for two reasons. First, the state-funded Birth to Age 2 Special Education program shifted from OSPI to the Early Support for Infant and Toddlers program at DCYF. This reduced the 2020-21 forecast by 10,381. Second, Special Education enrollment declined due to concerns about COVID-19 and remote/hybrid schooling. In 2021-22, the Special Education enrollment declined slightly from the prior year, both in 3-PreK and K-age 21. The Special Education caseload is forecasted to grow 2.5 percent in the 2022-23 year and then an average of 2.2 percent over the 2023-25 biennium. Enrollment is increasing in both PreK and K-21, with the significant year-over-year growth in 3-PreK as it recovers from low pandemic enrollment.

Risks to the Forecast

The risks to the Special Education enrollment forecast are high. Special Education enrollment is subject to the same risks as the Common Schools forecast.
